Introduction

The focus of this research series is the geographic distribution of philanthropic grantmaking organizations and their activities across the United States. Yet, neither the terms “philanthropic organizations” nor “grantmaking” have common legal or academic definitions on which to base our analysis. Schools, churches, hospitals, volunteer organizations, private family foundations, and large donor-advised funds are all examples of tax-exempt organizations in the United States that could reasonably be classified as philanthropic organizations. What’s more, these same organizations may in turn conduct grantmaking activities in the form of scholarships, charitable giving, research funding, or investment in community infrastructure, among other things. Not all these activities are relevant to our analysis.

In the accompanying report, we are solely focused on philanthropic grantmaking organizations that regularly provide a meaningful amount of broadly accessible grant funding to support community needs. Thus, it is necessary to define what we mean by philanthropic grantmaking organizations in order to identify and remove out-of-scope organizations from our analysis. We broadly define philanthropic grantmaking organizations as tax-exempt public charities or private foundations that are involved in broadly accessible, routine, and relevant domestic grantmaking as part of their regular operations. For our purposes, broadly accessible grantmaking means that the grants being issued by the organization are not systematically restricted to a limited group of potential recipients, such as scholarships given by a school to attend that school, or support organizations who exist for the sole purpose of aggregating funding for one parent entity. Routine grantmaking refers to the activity being a regularly occurring part of the organization's operations, meaning that organizations give on a consistent annual basis and not sporadically, with grantmaking occurring in some years but not in others. Finally, relevant refers to the types of organizations and their grants. Our focus is on grantmaking that supports various types of community-building activities whose primary purpose is domestic and whose target population is humans (i.e., not animal welfare organizations).

The purpose of this technical appendix is to provide the detail necessary to understand the methods that were employed to generate the datasets used for the analyses conducted in the accompanying report. Our hope is that this technical appendix will also allow other researchers who may wish to replicate or expand on this work – or make different assumptions than we did and see what the results would be – to be able to do so with relative ease. This technical appendix is broken up into two sections. The first outlines the IRS Form-990/990PF data source and details the methods that were applied to it to arrive at our final dataset. The second section discusses some limitations associated with the data used for our analyses and with our methodological approach.

The first, and main, data source used in our analyses is the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Form-990 and Form-990PF annual financial extracts for tax years 2014 to 2021. These annual extracts include all Form-990s and -990PFs filed in a given tax year by organizations classified as public charities or private foundations. All active tax-exempt organizations in the United States are required to file documents with the IRS annually. However, the IRS Form-990/990PF data does not include data on organizations that only filed a Form 990N or Form 990EZ in a given tax year. These organizations are relatively small in size, either with less than $200,000 in gross receipts annually and/or with less than $500,000 in assets. While a potentially important component of philanthropy in the United States, neither of these short-form tax filings contain the necessary financial data needed to conduct analysis, and so these organizations were excluded.

Importantly, the IRS financial extract files are made available on a calendar year basis, not a tax year basis. Many organizations file taxes in subsequent calendar years relative to the tax year they pertain to due to filing deadlines after the end of the calendar year for fiscal year filers, and the filing of amended returns, among other reasons. For this reason, we initially retrieved IRS Form-990/990PF annual extracts for calendar years 2014 to 2022 to correspond to tax years 2014 to 2021. IRS Form-990/990PF financial extract data were downloaded directly from the IRS's website, with the exception of the IRS Form-990PF financial extracts for calendar years 2017, 2018, and 2019. These were not available publicly at the time this report was written. Therefore, these calendar year extracts were obtained directly from the IRS.

The second data source used in our analysis is the IRS's Exempt Organizations Business Master File (BMF). This data constitutes a near universe of active tax-exempt organizations registered in the United States. The BMF data was used to obtain geographic information (including filing addresses) and National Taxonomy of Exempt Entities (NTEE) codes, which are not included in the Form-990/990PF financial extract data. The BMF was also used to fill in missing assets and expenses data when those fields were not available in the Form-990/990PF data.

Notably, the version of the BMF available through the IRS's website is updated monthly, and the IRS does not preserve past iterations. Thus, no panel version is available directly through the IRS. This creates a problem using the IRS's BMF data, as inactive organizations may be removed and active organizations may relocate, which would limit our ability to understand where organizations were located during the study period: a primary focus of the study. To circumvent this issue, we downloaded annual extracts of BMF data from the Urban Institute's National Center for Charitable Statistics (NCCS) website, which has created a unified version of the BMF preserving past iterations of the dataset. For consistency in timing, we downloaded versions of the BMF from NCCS that were created on or as close to December of a given calendar year. As with Form-990 and Form-990PF data, we included calendar year 2022 to capture any changes occurring for tax year 2021.

For both the IRS Form-990/990PF and BMF data, we kept only registered 501(c)(3) and 501(c)(4) organizations, excluding all other exempt entity types from our analysis. In addition, if multiple records existed for a given tax year (for example, if an organization filed an amended tax filing) we kept only the latest record for that tax year. This results in the two datasets (Form-990/990PF and BMF) containing records that are unique by organization EIN and tax year. As a final step we matched Form-990/990PF and BMF datasets using an organization's EIN and tax year.

The result is our initial baseline IRS dataset containing 461,300 total observations, consisting of 326,452 unique public charities and 134,848 unique private foundations, with a total of 459,213 unique organizations. The total number of unique organizations is less than the number of total observations because some entities are identified as public charities in some tax years and private foundations in others.

Identifying Philanthropic Grantmaking Organizations in IRS Form-990/990PF Data

The following section details the steps taken to arrive at our final dataset of philanthropic grantmaking organizations, which encompasses 84,161 unique organizations active from 2014 to 2021, with 32,482 unique public charities and 51,726 unique private foundations. References to the “main dataset” refer to the working version of the combined IRS Form-990/990PF and BMF data that is outlined above. Table 1 summarizes the number of excluded organizations, grants and assets that were removed as a result of each step.

Notes: The total number of unique organizations for both public charities and private foundations, after all exclusion steps, exceeds the total number of unique organizations overall because, overtime, grantmaking organizations may change whether they are classified as a public charity or private foundation, and so are counted in both categories.

Step 1: Geocode the dataset by identifying Census state and county FIPS codes.

This step was taken because FIPS codes were not available in the Form-990/990PF financial extract data nor the BMF data. The following process was followed:

- i. From the main dataset, full addresses (street number, street name, city, state, and 5-digit ZIP code) were uploaded to the U.S. Census Geocoder API to retrieve exact and non-exact FIPS code matches for states and counties. Unique EIN and full address pairs were retained to preserve changes in location over time. The results were merged onto the main dataset by EIN and year.
- ii. HUD USPS ZIP Code Crosswalk Files were download from the U.S Department of Housing and Urban Development's website for the fourth quarters of 2014 to 2021.¹ Only ZIP-county pairs with the largest ratio of addresses (based on tot_ratio) were kept, resulting in a crosswalk that was unique by ZIP code and year. The results were merged onto the main dataset by ZIP code and year.
- iii. If Census Geocoder returned an exact address match, the state and county FIPS codes from Census Geocoder were used as the final geocode.
- iv. For those records still missing a final geocode after step 1.iii., if the ratio of total addresses in the ZIP code found in a county is equal to one (tot_ratio = 1), the state and county FIPS codes from the HUD USPS ZIP Code Crosswalk were used as the final geocode.
- v. For those records still missing a final geocode after step 1.iv., if Census Geocoder returned a non-exact match and the ratio of total ZIP code addresses in the county was less than 1 and the FIPS codes from Census Geocoder matched the FIPS codes from HUD USPS ZIP Code Crosswalk, the state and county FIPS codes from Census Geocoder were used as the final geocode.
- vi. For those records still missing a final geocode after step 1.v., if the ratio of business addresses in the ZIP code found in a county is greater than 0.9 (bus_ratio > 0.9) , the state and county FIPS codes from the HUD USPS ZIP Code Crosswalk were used as the final geocode.
- vii. For those records still missing a final geocode after step 1.vi., if the state associated with that FIPS code matches the state from the BMF address, the state and county FIPS codes from Census Geocoder were used as the final geocode.
- viii. Finally, if any FIPS codes were missing for an organization in one tax year, but present in another, the FIPS code from the next available year following the missing year was used to fill in the missing value. If values were still missing, than the FIPS code from the next available year preceding the missing year was used.

Step 2: Calculate organization-level descriptive statistics

This step calculated several organization-level descriptive statistics for use in the exclusion steps and in future analysis. Total, maximums, and means (average annual) were calculated for the following financial variables:

- i. Total/mean grants to domestic organizations (grntstogovt), public charities only
- ii. Total/mean grants to individuals (grnsttoindiv), public charities only
- iii. Total/mean grants to foreign organizations (grntstofrgngovt), public charities only
- iv. Total/mean for all grants
 1. For public charities, equal to the sum of 2.i.–2.iii)
 2. For private foundations, total grants is equivalent to total contributions, gifts, and grants paid (contrpdbks)
- v. Total/mean functional expenses (totfuncexpns)
- vi. Total/mean assets at end of year (totassetsend)
- vii. Maximum single year value of grants to domestic organizations (grntstogovt)
- viii. Maximum single year value of all grants (calculated variable from step 2.iv)
- ix. Count of number of tax years in main dataset (should be between 1 and 8 years)
- x. The most recent tax year in main dataset (should be between 2014 and 2021)
- xi. Total number of years with $0 of total grantmaking (values from 2.i–2.iv)

Step 3: Exclude organizations with fewer than three years of tax data (value calculated in step 2.ix).

Generally speaking, organizations that were present at the tail ends of our dataset (2014 or 2021) were more likely to be excluded during this step, indicating that this step is largely removing those organizations that discontinued operations around the beginning of the study period, or began operations around the end of the study period.

Table 2. Number of Unique Organizations with Three or Fewer Year of Data, by Tax Year

Tax Year	Total Years of Data in Dataset
2014	12,941	10,507	79
2015	3,549	11,545	76
2016	3,158	4,116	67
2017	2,983	3,397	62
2018	2,704	3,696	63

2019	6,489	3,819	44
2020	4,469	16,599	78
2021	22,364	16,842	104

Sources: Internal Revenue Service Form-990 and -990PF Annual Extracts, 2014–2021.

Step 4: Exclude organizations based outside of the United States, District of Columbia, or Puerto Rico, and those with no identifiable geocodes (still missing a final geocode after step 1.viii).

This step limited the database to just domestic grantmaking organizations.

Step 5: Exclude organizations with $0 in total grantmaking from 2014 to 2021 (value calculated in step 2.iv).

This step removed organizations that did not have any grantmaking during the study period and, thus, are not a focus of the research.

Step 6: Exclude organizations with $0 in total assets or expenses (values calculated in steps 2.v and 2.vi).

This step removed organizations with potential data quality issues.

Step 7: Exclude organizations where the ratio of total grants (2.iv) to total expenses (2.v) is greater than 1.

This step removed organizations with potential data quality issues.

Step 8: Exclude organizations with less than $25,000 in total average annual grantmaking from 2014 to 2021 (value calculated in step 2.iv).

This step removed organizations that did not conduct a meaningful amount of grantmaking during the study period and, thus, had the potential to inflate the count of grantmaking organizations present in communities in a way that might be misleading with respect to the availability of substantive grantmaking capacity.

Step 9: Exclude organizations where the largest single year (2.vi) of grantmaking exceeds 75 percent of total grantmaking (2.iv).

This step removed organizations where a single year of grantmaking made up the vast majority of grantmaking by the organization over the study period. Based on a review of a sample of the tax returns of such organizations, the research team found that, in many cases, these were single purpose entities that were transferring assets to another, often related, entity. Often it was a building or other physical asset being transferred from a time-limited development entity to a parent entity. As such, these transactions did not appear to be the kind of regular, broadly available grantmaking activities that were the focus of this research.

Step 10: Exclude organizations based on their NTEE or NTEECC code. Organizations for the following codes were excluded:

- i. NTEE codes:
 - D: Animal-Related
 - G: Voluntary Health Associations & Medical Disciplines
 - H: Medical Research
 - Q: International, Foreign Affairs & National Security
- ii. For additional exclusions see Table 3. List of major NTEE and primary purpose codes excluded from database.

This step removed organizations that did not appear to be relevant given the focus of the research.

Step 11: Exclude organizations based on their Form-990 non-private foundation reason code (nonpfrea).

This was done for the following codes:

- i. 5 – Medical research organization (described in 170(b)1)(A)(i))
- ii. 11 – Organization testing for public safety (described in section 509(a)(4))
- iii. 12 – Type I Section 509(a)(3) supporting organization
- iv. 13 – Type II Section 509(a)(3) supporting organization
- v. 14 – Type III--Functionally integrated Section 509(a)(3) supporting organization
- vi. 15 – Type III--Other Section 509(a)(3) supporting organization

This step removed organizations that did not appear to be relevant given the focus of the research.

Step 12: Exclude certain health care or higher education organizations based on the following criteria:

- i. Exclude organizations with a Health Care-related NTEE code (major NTEE category “E”) where the terms “hospital”, “health system”, “system”, or “medical center” are present in the organization’s name, or that have one of the following NTEE codes:
 - a. E20: Hospitals
 - b. E21: Community Health Systems
 - c. E22: General Hospitals
 - d. E24: Specialty Hospitals

- e. E30: Ambulatory & Primary Health Care
- f. E31: Group Health Practices
- g. E32: Community Clinics
- h. E40: Reproductive Health Care
- i. E42: Family Planning
- j. E61: Blood Banks
- k. E62: Emergency Medical Services & Transport
- l. E65: Organ & Tissue Banks
- m. E6A: Pharmacies and drug stores
- n. E90: Nursing
- o. E91: Nursing Facilities
- p. E92: Home Health Care
- q. F31: Psychiatric Hospitals
- r. P74: Hospices
- ii. Exclude organizations with an Education-related NTEE code (major NTEE category “B”) where the terms “college”, “university”, or “higher education” are present in the organization’s name, or that have one of the following NTEE codes:
 - a. B40: Higher Education
 - b. B41: Two-Year Colleges
 - c. B42: Undergraduate Colleges
 - d. B43: Universities
 - e. B50: Graduate & Professional Schools

This step removed various direct health care providers and higher education institutions. This was done based on a review of a sample of tax forms for such entities that found that the vast majority of the grantmaking activities conducted by these types of entities was of a type that was not deemed relevant for the focus of this research. These included research subgrants, scholarships, and support for affiliated health practices, among others.

Step 13: Exclude organizations identified through manual reviews

- i. See Table 4: List of organizations excluded from the database through manual reviews at the end of this technical appendix
- ii. See Table 5: List of organizations excluded as Major Nationwide Funders at the end of this technical appendix

This step removed various other large grantmaking organizations that were deemed either irrelevant given the focus of the research, or that were known to have a large, nationwide (i.e., non-local) scope for their grantmaking activities that would misleadingly skew the results if they were included in the dataset and counted alongside primarily locally focused grant makers.

Limitations of the IRS Data

A chief difficulty in conducting the type of analyses included in the accompanying report is developing a consistent methodology for what organizations to include or exclude, and then applying it to more than 500,000 organizations. While efforts were made to compile a robust and broad dataset and base our methodological decisions on a firm understanding of the data and the grantmaking industry, it is likely that some grant makers whose activities are relevant to our study were excluded from the dataset and equally likely that the activities of some organizations included in the dataset are not relevant to our study. It is possible that our findings would be materially different if we were to make different methodological decisions about what organizations to include or exclude.

In addition, the IRS Form-990/990PF data used for this study do not contain detailed information that it would have been ideal to have in studying this subject. Specifically, the IRS financial extract data only include the total amount of grants made by each organization and does not contain any information on the recipient of those grants or their specific purpose.

Given these limitations, we caution readers against over-extrapolating the findings of this research and encourage readers to highlight the limitations of findings where appropriate. Estimates using the IRS Form 990/990PF data are best thought of as estimates of the presence, grantmaking activities, and asset holdings of grantmaking organizations based on where they are headquartered. Rural and urban summaries of IRS data should be interpreted as being related to the location of the grant maker and not as an indicator of the urban or rural status of the ultimate recipient of those activities. These data do not capture the fact that many urban-based organizations serve and work in rural communities, and vice versa.
